

Short description

Special test procedures are needed to determine the immunity of integrated circuits (IC) to RF interference. Defined RF disturbances have to be injected into the IC via defined networks for this purpose.